Lightnings, Mustangs and Thunderbolts of the Nist U. S. Air Force smashed enemy gun positions and troconcentrations on the western side of the Cherbourty Peris sula. More than 200 planes participated in the attacks tween Coutances and Lessay and in the vicinity of St. Le.

The British, troops protecting the Canadian flank avanced along the north bank of the River Odon. Versu which they took is four miles southwest of Caen.

The British advance coupled with the Canadian drive turned what was a dangerous Allied salient subject to constant German counter-attacks into a firm position and placed the Germans in an uncomfortable silient of their own north of Carpiquet and west of Caen. Field dispatches said the Canadians were fighting sclose outertors for the Carpiquet air field.

BRITISH ATTACK

The British troops struck forward with them, winning ground south of Carpiquet.

The Canadian attack chopped at the heart of the German defenses about Caen, but there was as yet no indication that Montgomery had ordered a general all-out offensive on the city.
