General Marshall yesterday issued a strone pies for unification of the Army and Navy, and one of the most important reasons for it, he says, is the need for a world-wide military esponance system. We can no longer rely on the "coffee cup intelligence" acquired by military attaches at diplomatic dinners, the Chief of Staff argues, we must set trained men no poking around in all the dark closets of the world.

The General, we think, made an excellent point, just as he did when he put forward his recommendations for universal military trainine. War is his business, and the evidence of his lifetime proves that it is inevitable. The sensible and practical thing to do is prepare for it in time of peace, or, properly, true.

General Marshall recalled, with a smile, that there was a time when Consmitted the state of the state of the same constitution of General Marshall recalled, with a smile, that there was a time when Congress discouraged any effort to build up a world-wide network of spies. That time, we think, should be recalled with a sigh. It was a time when we believed in international good will, believed that there was something dishonorable about spying on our neighbors. We didn't believe it hard enough, and it didn't come 'true. Now, most of us. like General Marshall, don't believe it at all.

There has been considerable confusion over the potentialities of DDT, with core of errorest otteres, occupying the same centeral position in the DDT discussion as that held by churchmen in the atom areument, arising to protest that a diright and will off all the bugs will also starve off fish and fowl, and should, therefore, be outlined.

In the early days, when the drug was first taken off the secret list and the sweeping claims of its investors rang in our ears, we were almost converted to the prohibitionist school. Then we discovered that the hardy old cockroach anickers at DDT. He doesn't get fat on the stuff, true, but he shakes it off as easily as he does that straune, green compound housewives have been spreading around in kitchens for years.

In our disillusionment, we took to succeive at DDT and publicly quoting from the late Arthur Brisbane, who always insisted that man was losing the War of the Insects and probably didn't have more than another to reasoned, and the coektoach can survive DDT, such a sessioned campaigner as the fix house as a sessioned campaigner as the fix house a sessioned campaigner as the fix house.

if the cockroach can survive DDT, such a seasoned campaigner as the fly i-house, stable, horse or blue-buttlet won't even fund it a minor annoyance. Well, we are happy to report, we were wrong, DDT will kill flies. Not only that, it will kill North Carolina flies, beyond it will kill North Carolina files, beyond question the most virile breed known to man. Over in Wake County a couple of entomologists from the State Board of Health sprayed a milk house with DDT and the files died of Ilike files. And eleven daws later, when a flight of 200 «Kamikares doubtless» roared in through an open sereen door they were struck down by the after-effects of the first ypraying "One hour later," the entomologists reported in the deathless prose of their craft, "approximately 80 per cent of the files had fallen to the floor and showed symptoms of DDT polositing."

ploor and snowcu symptons to DI polocuting.

This is a monumental victory, indeed, and hope flames within us again. Someday, somebow, somebody will find a way to get rid of cockroaches without burning the house down. And if man can turn back the insect hordes, surely he can handle the atom.

The Chicago Tribune demonstrates a deceptively simple formula for journalistic success. It long ago adopted a set of rigid, durable principles which have successfully withstood the flood-tide of history. The Tribune is for America, or al least it is for the America that existed back in the McEdinley and foreign wars, unless they are frankly imperialistic and designed to garnet retritory. And, because it regards any sort of ilberalism as foreign in origin, it is against liberals.

This credo still serves the Tribune well, making it, according to its mastinead, the World's Greatest Newspaper. It enables Colonel McCormick, the properties, to work out quick and simple solutions, to the world's problems, Lend-lease, and all the complicated financing of World War II, becomes crystal clear under his analysis. What we did it seems, was per the Mr. Rossenties. Now the Tribune has measured General MacArthur against its own standards and found him a giant. He is the only man in power today who can lay claim to the title of statesman, the Tribune announces. "That is why every brutal fool in every capital of the world is trying to destroy him and his influence."

The Tribunc has a great negative in-The Tribuic has a great negative in-fluence in America, and we are sorry to see General MacArthur thus clutched to its bosom and identified with its strange philosophy. He is almost certain to come in for a share of the dead cats that are constantly and properly hurled at Colonel McCormick.

It's unimportant, and proves nothing except our ienorance, but we didn't know Dr. Hjalmar Schacht's middle name until yesterday, when the International War Crimes Court listed him in what the Associated Press called the most sweeping indictment in history. It turns out that the former Nazi Economics Minister and Reichbank president's full handle is Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht. It seems peculiarly appropriate now that he is scheduled to go west.

The Alom Control Bill, now before Congress, was shrouded in such strict secrecy that at first the War Department didn't want the provisions of the bill published. Brais hats murely wanted to refer to the bill by number, Finally they got, coid feet on such ultrast up a nine-man committee composed of $1-a-year men drafter from big business, to control future development of the atom. Individual Rights

The B-B-H Bill has what seems to be reasonable provisions to protect the rights of the individual in a trade union. The till provides that any new employee dives, and that a labor union cannot cause a man to be fired unless his expulsion from the standard ristitation fee and the standard rate of dues, and that a labor union cannot cause a man to be fired unless his expulsion from the union is preceded by written charges and a bearing.

See the standard initiation fee and the standard rate of dues, and that a labor union cannot cause a man to be fired unless his expulsion from the union is preceded by written charges and a bearing.

See the standard initiation fee and the closed shop by an unnecessarily drastic step. The bill provides that closed shop agreement will be lawful as members and where the agreement is ratified by 60 per cent of all employees by secret ballot.

A sufficient check could be provided by requiring that the making of any new contract be preceded by an and specifying that the contract could continue for only one year. This would make it necessary to police the internal affairs of the union.

Mild or Drastic?

Mild or Drastico

Only Congress can take action with regard to abuses growing out of the encroachment of labor on the management field. An amendment to the basic labor act could define supervisory emphyses who would not be.

These prosposals have a drastic sound fotay. If public opinion snifts shruptly against organized labor, as it threatens to do. they are likely to seem mild by comparison with what may come two or three years from now.
