Ridgway Sees Long European Need For Aid

Can't Defend Self In Foreseeable Time By JOE HALL WASHINGTON.—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway testified today that Western Europe cannot take over its own defense alone in the foreseeable future.

The retiring commander of North Atlantic Treaty Organization Forces also told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that the Russian "peace offensive" is testing brakes on the military build-up of the Free World through its effect on public opinion in Europe.

Appearing in support of the administration's $5,800,000,000 Foreign Aid Program for the year beginning July 1, Ridgway said it is going to take a long time to develop self-sufficiency in the military field so that American troops can come home.

When he was NATO commander, President Eisenhower spoke hopefully of being able to begin U. S. troop withdrawals some time in 1954.

Sen. Gillette (D-Iowa) asked if the European Defense Community could take over Western Europe's defenses alone when it comes into being or shortly thereafter.

"Not in the foreseeable future," Ridgway replied.

In discussion of the Russian peace gestures, Ridgway said they have had "a recognizable adverse reaction in certain segments of European public opinion" against defense preparations.

The effect, he said, has been a tendency in some nations "to put off the evil day of decision on assumption of unpleasant burdens."

"The general described this as a perfectly natural reaction" of peoples longing for peace.

He said he did not know how long he would be staying in New York City. He was looking forward to a vacation, he said, and to see relatives in Indiana, St. Paul, Minn. and Arizona.

After his long confinement, he has a yearning to roam "the land of the living and the dead."

Otis obviously wanted to enjoy the color and life of his new freedom after the drabness of prison.

"In prison," he said, "I had dream of buying a newspaper and of riding on trains."

"Life in prison is so drab and colorless that the dreams of people in confinement can be very vivid. The dreams make up for the lack of color. Sometimes they are so vivid that you have to stop and think whether it was real or just a dream."

Proposed Cut In Air Force Under Fire

WASHINGTON.—Senators of both parties criticized proposed Air Force money cuts as dangerous today but Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) said they were better than the 100-million dollar cut in six months that 143 wings in three years."

The Senate majority leader, indicated he thinks President Eisenhower will emphasize a buy-up program for the Air Force in fiscal 1954 defense cuts in a national radio report tonight on security, budget balancing and taxation.

His program was laid before GOP Congressional leaders at a White House conference and immediately ran into important opposition.

Chairman Reed (R-NY) of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee told reporters "not a thing happened at the White House session to change his determination that the excess profits tax must die June 30, or his belief that individual income taxes ought to be cut sooner than Jan. 1 when they are now starting law to drop about 10 per cent.

Reed, a key figure in the matter since his committee normally must start all tax bills through Congress, and it would require new legislation to continue the excess profits tax.

The committee can be bypassed by various parliamentary maneuvers, but these would be rare and drastic alternatives.

Eisenhower called in the Congressional leaders to go over a radio address he is making to the nation tonight—his first "fireside chat" type since taking office. This broadcast at 9:30 P. M. (EST) over all major networks is expected to deal with the problems of defense cost and financing.

The excess profits tax brings the Government about $2 1/2 billion dollars a year.

It is a special levy designed to skim annual profits from the corporations on the theory that the profits were the result of stimulus from the business from defense spending. Business men have long complained that there are many incomes in U. S.

Reed's committee has already gone on record 156 against extending the tax beyond June 30. By passing the group through some parliamentary maneuver, could it open a breach which would cause the administration difficulty on other matters the committee handles such as reciprocal trade and social security legislation.

Asked specifically whether any bypassing of his committee on key questions would affect prospects for administration bills on other subjects, Reed said:

"I am not sure that it is in the interest of a bill which is sponsoring for a cut of about 10 per cent in individual income taxes on July 1.
