Henderson County Site Of Search

(Special to The News)

HENDERSONVILLE—A tough little toddler from Charlotte went mountain climbing near here last night and nearly scared folks to death before they found him at 5:15 this morning.

Michael Douglas McMillan, 2½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. McMillan of Charlotte, strayed from the lawn of his uncle, J. J. Renee, about 4 p.m. yesterday.

A group of searchers which at one point was estimated at 500 people scoured the woods and thickets of this mountain country all night long.

And this morning Mike was found.

CLIMBED MOUNTAIN

He had climbed up one side of a nearby mountain and down the other—a distance of nearly a mile.

Deputy Sheriff E. K. Waters said an "unusually warm night" appeared to have spared the boy from serious exposure, but he was taken to a hospital for a checkup.

"He appeared to be all right when they found him though," the deputy said.

The child wore only a pair of red shorts when he wandered off.

BLOODHOUNDS USED

Bloodhounds were brought in to the search about 7 p.m. yesterday. However, the feet of hundreds of well-meaning volunteers had hopelessly complicated the trail by then.

At 7 a.m. today Sheriff Waters reported:

"There's still an awful mob of people out there looking, about 500 of them. But the dogs just don't have a chance."

The search was directed by the Sheriff's Dept., assisted by the Henderson Fire Dept., the Civil Air Patrol and other volunteers.

It was centered around the Renee home where Mike and his mother were visiting for the weekend. Mr. McMillan was reported in Charlotte when the child disappeared.

Climber's Body To Be Removed

LONGMIRE, Mt. Rainier National Park, Wash. (AP) — The body of William Haupt, 20, of Bethlehem, Pa., will be brought down today from a 14,000-foot mountain.

Haupt died late yesterday of injuries received in a fall in a crevasse near the summit of the ice-capped Mt. Rainier.

He was one of a party of 12 climbing to the summit by way of Ingraham Glacier. The party was going on a regular trail at the 13,000-foot level when the snow gave way without warning beneath Haupt and his guide, Gary Rose, assistant chief summit guide.

Rose was not injured in the early morning fall but Haupt was badly hurt. It was believed his back was broken. He was almost completely buried in the snow, which he had fallen from the junction of the crevasse and 25 feet below the upper ledge.

Half an hour after the accident Haupt was brought out of the crevasse. Rose led the other members of the party back to the 10,000-foot level where they had camped Saturday night. Dr. J. H. Lehmann of Seattle, who was in the same party, stayed with Haupt and administered first aid.

Labor Day Death Toll

(News Staff Photo by Tom Franklin-Hunter) The FALL OF SUMMER — You can bet that summer is over. Perhaps the weather won't show it, but youngsters know it. When baseball gives way to football — that's the most certain sign of all. This photograph gives proof positive that summer is over as far as Junior is concerned and that fall is ready to take over. Out on Hanson Dr. they've wasted no time in getting on with fall. This football game shows that heat is no barrier to participation. Tim Beaver is lugging the pigskin — and fumbling — and tackling him are Gerry Montaigne, left, and Lee Myers, rear. And you've got to realize that the fumble was caused by early-season jitters.

Triumphant Billy Graham Returns Home

Triumphant Evangelist Billy Graham waved and smiled at his hometown folks as he stepped off a train here this afternoon.

Looking thin and less tanned than when he started the New York City crusade over three months ago, Mr. Graham seemed happy to be home.

He went to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank Graham, on Park Rd. for lunch and then planned to drive on to his home residence late this afternoon.

Mr. Graham boarded the train for Charlotte last night following the last meeting of the crusade in Times Square where he transformed the environs of the site into a massive open air church.

THROUGH HUSHED A huge throng stood hushed and reverent as loud-speakers carried the evangelist's plea to "seek Christ."

The speakers' platform was south of 42nd Street. An ocean of faces looked up at Graham from all around. The crowd stood shoulder to shoulder from building to building.

Gospel songs rang out at the "Crossroads of the World"—usually echoing with juke box jive.

He waved in the gathering dusk. Graham said: "Here in Times Square is the dove which the angelic, the harlot — along with the finest citizens of the world. It is primarily a place of amusement, money making, drinking, eating and making merry.

"Tonight for a few moments it is being turned into a great cathedral as a symbol of spiritual revival that is now in progress in the United States. Let us tell the world tonight that we Americans believe in God."

Graham estimated during his talk that 200,000 persons were in the crowd.

Chief Inspector Thomas A. Nielsen of the Police Department estimated the crowd at 75,000. "I know exactly how many were present, but I am certain that it was the largest crowd it has been in my privilege to address."

Traffic was halted in the area during the meeting. The greater part of the crowd was on Broadway from 41st to 37th Streets. There also were groups on side streets and on 8th and 7th avenues, and north of 42nd Street to 47th Street.

DECATUR, Neb. (AP) — Sheriff's officers today launched a gigantic hunt for a 39-year-old man who carried out threats against his family and fatally shot two persons and injured two others.

Burt County Sheriff William Dean said Arthur McClusky, 39, Omaha, burst into the Glenn Stoddard farm Saturday night and fatally shot his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ida Stoddard, 39, and a friend, Orville Brewer, 60.

Stoddard was wounded slightly and his daughter, Mrs. Betty McClusky, 26, was kidnaped and beaten with a crowbar by her estranged husband. She was treated at a hospital and released last night.

Safety Official Says Worst Is Yet To Come

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's tragic death toll for the Labor Day weekend appeared heading toward the pre-holiday prediction of 420 today with the most dangerous period, the homeward rush, still to come.

There was a steady climb in fatalities yesterday, with millions of motorists on the highways in the summer's last long weekend holiday.

The death toll is tragically following the figures used in making advance estimates, said Ned H. Dearborn, president of the National Safety Council. "The worst is still to come."

The council had estimated a total of 420 for the 72-hour period from 8 p.m. Friday to midnight tonight (local time).

Dearborn said unless the trend changes the final toll will be close to the council's prediction.

The count in the first 33 hours of the holiday period showed about 150 fatalities. In the next 24 hours, however, the total was more than 150.

During last year's three-day Labor Day holiday there were 435 traffic deaths. Non-holiday test survey made by The Associated Press during a recent 78-hour weekend showed 378 auto fatalities, a record traffic toll for Labor Day was 461 for a three-day period in 1951.

One of the worst accidents during the holiday occurred yesterday near Effington, in Southern Illinois. Five persons burned to death when their car plunged into a ditch and burst into flames.

Ives said most labor leaders are honest men, but he added that the activities of a relative handful of crooks, hoodlums and men of flexible morals who have attached themselves to the labor movement threaten to give all labor a bad name.

He suggested that labor union members take a more active interest in the affairs of their organizations.

AFL-CIO President George Meany (labor) said a different kind of congressional investigation—a full-scale probe of "the whole price-profit-wage relationship as it affects the cost of living."

Such a study, he said, could help bring about an effective and ambitious program to combat inflation.

He took issue with those who he said have tried to blame labor unions for price increases because of their demands for higher wages. In some cases, he said, production improvements offset higher wage rates while in others "employers have raised prices without their increased labor costs."

Contending high wage rates are justified, he said that "before there can be mass production, there must be the power of mass consumption, made possible by high union wage standards and working conditions."

Phillip M. Talbott, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said in another weekend statement that "our heritage of recognizing the dignity of all kinds of labor has, in large part, made possible our almost classless society and bestowed upon us our multiple economic blessings."

Violence Flares Around State

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

This Labor Day weekend is shaping up as the most deadly in recent years. The state highway patrol reported 13 persons dead and 102 injured in auto accidents from 6 p.m. Friday to late last night.

Three persons were reported shot to death and one woman was beaten to death. A three-year-old child burned to death in a parked car.

Police feared the tall would mount higher as thousands of families poured home today and tonight from the beaches and mountains.

Eleven people died in traffic last year during the long weekend. They were killed in 1955 and 11 in 1954.
