Troops Block Integration Of School at Little Rock; FBI Investigation Underway

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 4 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation was assigned tonight to collect facts concerning integration of Little Rock's Central High School. Atty. Gen. Brownell made the assignment at Washington after National Guardsmen, acting on orders of Gov. Orval Faubus, turned away nine Negro students attempting to enter the school.

Faubus said he definitely ordered the guardmen to prevent mixing of the races in Little Rock school. He denied his action constituted defiance of a U. S. Court integration order.

Brownell said in a statement that U. S. Dist. Judge Ronald M. Davies of Little Rock, who signed the integration order, had requested the Justice Department to assist the court in collecting facts as to the interference with the carrying out of the court's order requiring compliance with the plan of the Little Rock School Board to integrate gradually the public schools.

"Pursuant to the Judge's request, the Justice Department has made available to the court the investigative facilities of the FBI and the office of the United States attorney and the United States marshal at Little Rock," Brownell said.

"Reports will be made to Judge Davies as the information is collected," Brownell said.

Faubus defended Orval Faubus in his statement. He said he was the president of the state and the preserver of the peace, not a federal government agent.

The governor of a state is the preserver of the peace, not a federal government agent. He said he was the president of the state and the preserver of the peace, not a federal government agent.

FBI agents interviewed the Negro students and their advisers. Faubus refused to speculate on the officials' report to President Eisenhower on the Little Rock school situation shortly after the president arrived at Newport, R. I., for a vacation.

Brownell is "under orders," he said, to keep in close touch with the situation. He said he had no plans to resign.

The conference between the President and Brownell raised the point of whether the federal government planned some move to halt the use of National Guardsmen blocking integration at Little Rock.

Meanwhile, U. S. Marshal Beal Kidd said he had no plans to arrest any Negro students who had been arrested by the National Guardsmen. He said he had no authority to arrest anyone without a court order and none has been issued.

No violence resulted this morning when a Negro girl, the first of her race to attempt to enter the high school, moved through a crowd of National Guardsmen to seek admittance. When the guardsmen turned her away she promptly moved to Reynolds High School.

Attention will be focused on Reynolds High School, where a 15-year-old Negro girl will register along with about 1,800 white students.

City school officials said they expect a normal day as some 200 children sign up for classes at the city's 30 schools. Approximately 2,250 will be first graders. Some 1,600 will be children in the annexation area who are attending city schools for the first time.

Police Chief James I. Walker, taking note of integration disorders at Greensboro and Charlotte, said no "unauthorized persons" would be permitted on the Reynolds campus. He said he would call attention to state and city laws which prohibit picketing in and around schools and interference with the orderly process and operation of schools.

"I have complete confidence in the city school system," he said.
