NAVAL UNITS JOIN WITH REBEL FORCE

Army Troops Make No Effort To Put Down Outbreak

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — A revolt backed by some naval units and maritime police broke out today in the central Cuban city of Cienfuegos. Fighting still is in progress.

First telephoned reports said the naval and maritime police units joined forces in rebel headquarters and captured police headquarters. The fighting broke out shortly after dawn.

Police resisted but Army troops in the city were said to have made no move to intervene. Supporters of Castro were said to be throwing the streets of Cienfuegos shouting "President Batista has fallen." Government has been taken over by military junta headed by army officers.

Reports from Cienfuegos said Police Chief Antonio Cruz Britton had refused to surrender his headquarters and ordered police to resist. They added Britton later was seized by the rebels and his headquarters surrounded. An aide to the army commander was reported killed in early shooting.

BUSINESS CLOSE

Cienfuegos' banks and most business establishments were closed. One Cuban there said "all activity has been down."

A Cuban navy plane was circling Cienfuegos, Navy headquarters in Havana said, but no information of any outbreak in Cienfuegos.

Cienfuegos, a city of 200,000, lies about 200 miles southeast of Havana and is a big port for shipping sugar.

The Cuban Navy is reported to have a strength of about 7,000 officers and men. It has four frigates, two escort vessels and some smaller craft. The United States Coast Guard vessels. The Army numbers about 15,000 officers and men.

The fighting came only a day after President Fulbright-Batista celebrated the 24th anniversary of his first coup.

In yesterday's anniversary speech, Batista told officers, diplomats and his staff working hard to determine to finish off his four-year term. It ends next year.

He promised to crush any revolution ruthlessly. He dismissed rebel leader Castro as a "bloody communist." Castro's friends have denied he is a Communist.

Ears Called Man's Best Identification

By RENNIE TAYLOR
Associated Press Science Reporter

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Don't lead anyone wrong, they may be your best identification tag.

University of California researchers, spurred by the suggestion of a Chicago photographer of babies, are about to start a research project to determine whether the human ear changes shape during the course of life.

If they find it does not change contour, and that is what they fail to expect, they plan to set up a system which could supplement or even compete with the fingerprinting as a means of identification.

The ear system might become the most nearly foolproof way of identifying babies and conceivably could be a great help in criminology, said Dr. Douglas Kelley, said Dr. Douglas Kelley. After talking with Manuel Zentgraf, the photographer, Dr. Kelley said he was ready to get behind a one-year investigation to identify the ear identification tag.

By JULIAN SCHERER

The Atomic Energy Commission had under consideration today a proposal from the Carolina-Virginia Nuclear Power Associates Inc. of Charlotte, for construction and operation of a $17 million nuclear power plant.

While final approval may be several months off, the study by AEC is considered the first step before ultimate approval.

Under a broad AEC-industry partnership arrangement, it is believed both groups expect the plant to be in operation by 1962.

The Charlotte firm proposes to build the plant on a site within the system of four associated power companies. No site has been announced. Norman A. Cooke, president of member Duke Power Co., told The News "several sites are under consideration."

The plant will be used to generate electricity. The plant will be used to generate electricity. The plant will be used to generate electricity.

Colonel Breaks Up Interviews

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Armed National Guardsmen called out to prevent integration at Central High School today tried to break up a New York newspaperman's interview with persons in a shouting, turbulent segregationist crowd estimated at 500—the largest this week.

None of the more Negroes who were turned away by the cold steel of Guardsmen yesterday, showed up this morning.

It was the third morning that whites had appeared in front of the school in apparent support of Gov. Orval Faubus' conflict with a federal order to integrate the 2,000 pupil white school — and they feared Dr. Benjamin Fine, education editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

One said that while he interviewed several persons an unidentified colonel approached and told him to return to interviews.

"If you don't shut up, you'll have to leave," the colonel shouted. "It's from the north. He doesn't want the truth."

Interviews continue. Fine continued his interviews — flanked by guardsmen — until the Colonel personally escorted him across the street and onto the campus.

Gen. Sherman T. Clinger later called a press conference before the arrested troops to warn newsmen.

"You'll be arrested and fined if you do anything that might be an insult to a member of the force," the Colonel cheered lustily when Clinger, the state adjutant-general, called the conference.

Girl's School Entry Quiet

Second School Day Without Incident

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl walked quietly into Reynolds High School Auditorium at 10:30 a.m. today as the first Negro student ever to attend a white public school here.

A crowd of curious bystanders was waiting on Hawthorne Road in front of the school to watch Goodwin Yvonne Bailey as she arrived to enter the eleventh grade.

But other students said she walked by herself through the tunnel under Northwest Boulevard at the rear of the school, then up the gravel path to the building. She entered the auditorium where an orientation session was going on.

Police Chief James L. Waller told reporters, "I did not escort her."

Supt. Schools Craig Phillips confirmed that the girl's entry into the school was without incident. He told reporters that she walked into the school grounds.

Following the orientation session in the auditorium, she was scheduled to go into the main Reynolds High School building for instructions concerning her schedule for the year before being released for the day.

Small groups of persons had gathered early this morning in front of the school, apparently anxious to get a glimpse of the student. Many of them did not know that she was not supposed to report until later in the morning.

Police Chief Waller had warned photographers not to stay away from the school.
