DAVID OVENS

'Man Of The South'

Ovens Funeral Is Planned Tomorrow

David Owens, former "Man of the South" for whom Charlotte's Owens Auditorium is named, died yesterday after an acute attack of coronary thrombosis. He was 84 years old.
Mr. Owens, who helped build the J. B. Ivey chain into one of the leading retail organizations in the Southeast, collapsed a few minutes after a p.m. yesterday after addressing a group of buyers and managers.
The Charlotte Ivey's store was closed today.
Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 4 p.m. at the Myers Park Presbyterian Church, conducted by the pastor, Dr. James A. Fogarty, the associate pastor, Dr. A. Clarke Dean, and Dr. James A. Jones, a former pastor of the church and now president of Union Theological Seminary at Richmond, Va. Burial will be in Elmwood Cemetery.

Mr. Owens, the former Mayor Allan of Kingston, Ontario, Canada, died here May 12. Survivors include two brothers, Henry Owens of Bruce, Ontario, Canada, and Alec Owens in Seattle, Wash.

He was known perhaps even better for his promotion of good music here, his national leadership of merchants, his speech-making ability; his direction of many civic events; his Presbyterian Church activities.
He was selected as Charlotte's Man of the Year of 1950, by Charlotte News Men of the Year of previous years, who said that he could have been the Man of the Year in many previous years. '50 he became the Man of the South of 1951, a title awarded by the Dixie Business Magazine.
A large number of his friends and admirers got together on a tribute to the Man of the South at the head table, national and local leaders praised him for his services in many fields. Judge John J. Parker, former Sen. Cameron Morrison, Tom Glasgow, Benjie Minneman of New York and others took part in the testimonial, and the Man of the South award was presented to him.

Cuban Armor Rolls After Rebel Lprising

Casualties May Reach 125 Total

HAVANA, Cuba — Tanks and armored cars manned by heavily armed troops patrolled the streets of Cienfuegos today after the second outbreak of rebel action in two days.
Unconfirmed reports indicated the total of dead and wounded might reach as high as 125.

President Fulgencio Batista's armed forces were on the alert throughout Cuba but reports from the six provincial capitals said calm prevailed.
Army planes and Coast Guard vessels kept a constant watch to prevent any landings of reinforcements for rebel leader Fidel Castro.
The second bloody outbreak in the south central Cuban sugar port of Cienfuegos occurred yesterday morning after the government said it had completely smashed the previous day's attack.

HIDDEN MEN

Apparently some diehard disidents had hidden in buildings when airborne troops and armor supported by warplanes quelled the first outbreak.
Government planes, tanks, armored cars and troops carried out a furious assault against the small bands of rebel holdouts.

The military command said 50 to 80 rebels were killed or wounded in the first attack while 12 government troops were killed and 13 wounded. Telephone reports from Cienfuegos indicated casualties on both sides in the second attack might reach 50 persons killed or wounded.

Street patrols hunted possible survivors of the original disident group which was believed to have numbered up to 400.
Cubans in the naval base city identified the revolt leader as a former navy lieutenant, Jose San Roman Toledo. He reportedly called himself a "colonel of the revolutionary movement" supporting Castro, who operates from mountains of southeast Cuba. San Roman was believed to have fled to the hills behind Cienfuegos.

SUPPORT FOUND

Cubans credited San Roman, aided by sailors, with first capturing the Cayo Loco naval station near Cienfuegos town, dawn Thursday. Moving into town, he picked up support from the 60 maritime police and distributed naval station arms to civilian sympathizers of Castro.

They captured the national police headquarters and controlled most of the city of 53,000 persons. Then Army troops began to arrive after noon.
After bloody street battles, the government claimed the revolt was smashed by evening. But early yesterday a government troops again attacked police headquarters and two other buildings where rebels were apparently still holding out.

The government said rebel resistance quickly collapsed, ending the second round.
Meanwhile, in Mexico City yesterday police said four Cuban exiles tried unsuccessfully to assassinate the secretary of the Cuban embassy.

Little Rock Pleas Made

LITTLE ROCK — Supt. Virgil Blossom of Little Rock asked U. S. District Court today to delay integration at strifetorn Central High School, a move which would in effect call a truce in Arkansas' cold war with Federal authority.

A Negro attorney, Wiley Branton of Pine Bluff, Ark., opposed the step and said "any delay in integration would be a blow to the dignity of mankind and a blow to federal authority."
U. S. Dist. Judge Ronald N. Davies of Fargo, N. D., heard the opposing views then recessed court until 12 noon.

The school board, represented by attorney Richard Butler, told the court that the National Guard troops called out by Gov. Orval Faubus to halt integration last Monday had made it impossible to teach.
Butler said if the delay is granted to ease tensions, the board "will not deviate from their plan" to integrate.

"EACH DAY COUNTS"

Blossom testified: "Due to conditions around the school it is impossible for children within to receive an education. Nine months of school is not enough time. Each day this goes on is just another day out of the lives of these children."
Branton, representing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People declared "tension and agitation have no bearing on this lawsuit. They were brought about by actions of the governor and National Guard."
No cross-examination was permitted.

Every seat in the courtroom was filled. About 15 Negroes sat in the front rows, no white people sat with them.
Little Rock has held the nation's attention since Monday night when Gov. Faubus in a dramatic, last-minute move to halt integration sent a company of National Guardsmen to guard the school campus. He said his reason was to head off violence.

At the court hearing today the school board will give testimony to back up its claim that since the school bus plan started at the high school the tension, noise and hubbub has made teaching difficult.

WIDE ACTIVITIES

There was much activity in the city today. The school board will give testimony to back up its claim that since the school bus plan started at the high school the tension, noise and hubbub has made teaching difficult.

Syria's Neighbors Given Aid Boost

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower today speeded up U. S. aid to Syria's neighbors and expressed hope that "international Communist" would not push Syria into aggression.
Eisenhower's reaction to expanded aid to Syria's Arab neighbors was made known by Secretary of State Dulles after an urgent two-hour White House conference.

Dulles, flanked by deputy undersecretary Loy Henderson, read a three-page statement to reporters. He refused to go beyond it. Dulles said Henderson reported to Eisenhower on his 14-day fact-finding trip to the Middle East during which he talked to leaders of the countries bordering on Syria — Turkey, Lebanon, Iraq and Jordan.

Dulles said Henderson reported he had deep concern among these leaders about growing Communist domination and a buildup of Soviet arms beyond defensive needs in Syria.
The cabinet member said Henderson reported border incidents and subversive activities apparently directed at Syria's neighbors.

Carrie Squalls Over Atlantic

SAN JUAN, P. R. — Squalls in westward today from mid-Atlantic was newborn Hurricane Carrie, swinging 100-mile-an-hour winds in the air 1,000 miles from land.
The U. S. Weather Bureau located the center of the season's third whole gale last midnight at about 2,600 miles east southeast of Miami, Fla., and 1,730 miles east southeast of San Juan.

It was still more than 1,000 miles east of the Lesser Antilles, island outpost of the New World, and forecasters said that "from its present direction and forward speed, there is no immediate threat to insular areas."
Carrie was not even close enough to fly a hurricane hunter plane into. What wasn't expected to be before Sunday.

Carrie's westward movement rose slowly from 10 miles an hour when the hurricane was detected late yesterday, to 12 mph at midnight and was expected to be making 15 miles an hour during the rest of today.
Highest winds were estimated at 100 miles an hour over a small area near the storm center.

Joseph Caraher Stares As Officer Holds Knife

'Mad Ripper' Held For 8 Stabbings

CHICAGO — A lean, fowled, ex-night watchman was seized as Chicago's "Mad Ripper" last night, police said, shortly after the stealthy stabber knifed his seventh and eighth victims.
The chase began when two men who drove him into the arms of a "holy policeman."

Tall Joseph P. Caraher, 39, was captured after a block-long chase by a group of rock-throwing men who drove him into the arms of a "holy policeman."
The chase began when two men who drove him into the arms of a "holy policeman."

Caraher mumbled as Policeman John Koehn held him at gunpoint until more law officers arrived. He cursed his captors as "German spies."
CARRYING KNIFE
Police said Caraher was drunk and talking incoherently. They reported he was carrying a blood-stained pearl handled switchknife when seized.

Homicide Detective St. James Traut said Caraher "is definitely the stabber" who slashed eight persons in Chicago since Monday, Sept. 2 here yesterday.
Later four of the knife victims identified Caraher as their assailant.

"I never stabbed nobody. I was doing a service," Caraher rambled on at the Racine Avenue police station. Caraher had had a newswoman he went on a stabbing spree "because they're trying to hold me up."
No charges have been filed against Caraher.

The series of unprovoked attacks began Monday when Ronald McFadden of Tulsa, Okla., was stabbed in the arm as he waited for a subway train on the near North Side.
In each succeeding case, the Ripper attacked the same way. He sidled behind his victim jabbed once and walked off without saying a word. The victims described the feeling as a punch in the back or a pinch. Most never knew they had been stabbed until they saw or felt blood running.

Several of the victims were hospitalized, but none are in serious condition.
The slasher's trail ranged over a wide area. Thursday, he stabbed a Louisville, Ky. man as he walked the animals in Lincoln Park Zoo.
Yesterday, there were attacks on a 13-year-old boy on the North Side, two women walking just south of the Loop and a man on the Southwest Side.

A few minutes before the young girl was attacked a 24-year-old man was stabbed at a Northwest department store, and Tuesday, Caraher was caught after Jimmy Darnell, 20, and Ted Daniels, 35, saw him threaten Christine Uzcwieck, 14, and Jeanette Nitz, 12. The girls were backing away from Caraher and crying, the men said. Darnell and Daniels yelled at him and he suddenly jabbed a knife into Christine's arm.

Picking up rocks and other debris, the men gave chase, telling Caraher several times.
A photostat of Caraher's army discharge found in his hotel room showed he was honorably discharged as a private in 1944 for medical reasons.
Police said they also found a long rambling essay referring to the Kaiser, the German army and denouncing several minority groups.
