Girls, Gridders, Grads...

By Ron Speer

Girls . . . gridders . . . alumni . . .

They'll share the spotlight this afternoon at Memorial Stadium.

It's Husker Homecoming day and along with a football game between Nebraska and Missouri, a queen will be crowned and graduates of years gone by will swap yarns with college sidekicks of yesteryear.

Some 35,000 are expected for today's scrap, which matches the league dark-horse, Missouri, against a Nebraska team which has bogged down after a great start.

The Tigers, undefeated in conference play after two games, are 3-3 for the year. The Huskers have a 1-2 Big Eight record and are 2-4 for the season.

Missouri Favored

Missouri is a 6-point favorite according to the people who make—and sometimes get caught—the odds.

But the Tigers will be playing without the big noise in their attack, Phil Snowden. He is sidelined with injuries.

The veteran quarterback is the leading passer in the Big 8, having completed 34 of 57 tosses and is 5th in conference scoring with 25 points. Snowden also paces the loop in punting with a 42.4 average on 18 kicks.

But the Huskers boast the league's busiest kicker in senior quarterback George Harshman. The crew-cut field general has booted ball 24 times, more than any other Big 8 player, and has an average of 39.5.

Key Sophomores

A pair of sophomores may decide the outcome of today's game. Nebraska's Pat Fischer, who may or may not see heavy duty, and Missouri's Mel West, are the newcomers who can kick their heels.

Fischer, who was re-injured at Boulder last week, did not work out with Nebraska during practice sessions, and his status is highly doubtful.

West, however, is healthy and eager. He lost the conference rushing lead last week to Colorado's Howard Cook and will be bidding to regain the coveted spot.

West has gained 426 yards in 86 carries for an average of nearly 5 yards per try.

Crucial Meeting

Today's meeting is a crucial one for both teams. Nebraska's only hopes for victory in its remaining games are over Missouri and next week's foe, Kansas. Pittsburgh and Oklahoma complete NU's schedule.

If Missouri is unable to defeat Nebraska the Tigers have little chance of making a big showing in the conference.

The Huskers have lost but once on home ground this fall. Can they upset Missouri?

That's up to the Emanuels, the Frickes, the Naviauxs, the McCashlands, the Harshmans.

But there will be a multitude of Nebraska grads in the stands who'll be pulling for them.

GHOSTS, GOBLINS MIND MANNERS

Lincoln had one of its "quietest" Halloween's in several years according to police officials.

Lt. Reynold McMeen reported that the vandalism which generally accompanies the holiday was apparently absent here.

Local police had added an extra shift to the regular night police force to handle the homecoming display crowd at the University of Nebraska and to guard against vandalism.

Several thousand cars traveled the display route at the University Friday night without incident police officials said.

GOP CARAVAN ENDS; DRAWS HIGH PRAISE

By Don Walton

Fremont—The 1958 Nebrasla Republican caravan, largest in history, ended 7,000 miles of campaigning here Friday night with optimistic predictions of another GOP sweep in next Tuesday's election.

Republican state chairman Richard E. Spelts, Jr. of Grand Island summed it up this way:

"We found the tone of the people to be that of satisfaction with the job which our incumbent candidates have done. Their government experience compared with that of their opponents adds up to 166 years versus 10 years.

All Counties Seen

"Only two Democrats have had any experience at all in government.

"The people are not in the mood to change their type of government."

Republican candidates on the state-wide motorcade distributed more than 1,000,000 pieces of literature and appeared before more than 30,000 people in 138 Nebraska communities and all 93 counties during the past 4 weeks, Spelts said.

'Best Yet'

Planned and organized by Marvin E. Stromer of Lincoln, GOP executive secretary, and executed by Spelts, the caravan drew lavish praise from Republican candidates.

Sen. Roman Hruska noted at Schuyler, next to last stop Friday, that "this has been the best planned caravan of the 4 I have been on, and it has been more enthusiastically received by a greater number of people than any other.

"That means one thing," the Senator said. "We're winning."

WARM HELLO FOR ALUMS

Warm football weather with fair skies will greet Nebraskans and out-of-state alums Saturday for the Cornhusker's homecoming game. Highs over the state will range in the 60s.

Precipitation in Lincoln for October amounted to only .05 of an inch, compared to the normal amount of 1.66 inches. Total rainfall for the year, however, is 32.93 inches, compared with a normal record of 23.42 inches.

Lincoln, the Air Base and Omaha registered an identical high temperature Friday with 65.

DEPUTY ROMER

Wyoming Deputy Tells Of Her Capture, Actions

By Del Harding

Two prosecution witnesses Friday chopped holes in Caril Fugate's story that she did not know her family was dead until she was captured in Wyoming Jan. 29.

Sheriff Earl Heflin of Douglas, Wyo., said at Caril's murder trial in Lancaster District Court he found 7 newspaper clippings concerning the murders of Caril's step-father, mother and half-sister in the jacket the 15-year-old girl was wearing when she was taken into custody.

Dep. Sheriff William Romer of Casper, Wyo., testified that after Caril had gotten into his car west of Douglas Jan. 29 she told him "she had seen (Charles) Starkweather kill 10 people," including her step-father, mother and half-sister.

Caril had told a news conference Oct. 20 the first time she found out her family was dead was after her capture in Wyoming. She also said that Starkweather had not let her read newspapers during the 8-day period they were together before being captured.

Her defense attorney, John McArthur, had also stated in his opening statement at her trial that Caril's actions while with Starkweather "were prompted by the belief and promise that her family would be released unharmed" and that "no violence had been committed to her knowledge" while she and Starkweather were in the Marion Bartlett home at 924 Belmont.

McArthur, asked Friday after the trial had been adjourned until Monday for comment on the apparent inconsistencies, said Caril will explain when she takes the stand in her own defense next week.

The 7 newspaper clippings were from a story detailing the murders of the Bartlett family which ran in The Lincoln Star Jan. 28. Although the portions of the story clipped did not say specifically that the Bartletts had been murdered, one clipping did refer to "the slayings" and photos of the family and Caril herself were included.

McArthur asked Romer on cross examination if Caril had told him the circumstances of how her family had been killed. Romer replied that Caril said Starkweather and her mother, Mrs. Bartlett, had been arguing and that Mrs. Bartlett slapped Starkweather.

Tells Of Deaths

Bartlett intervened and Starkweather shot him and then shot Mrs. Barlett, Romer quoted Caril as saying. Two-year-old Betty Jean Bartlett reportedly was then struck by Starkweather (she died from head blows).

Romer also testified that Caril was "hysterical—crying and sobbing" when she ran up to his car west of Douglas as Starkweather was scuffling with Joseph Sprinkle, then of Casper, Wyo., on the road nearby for a rifle.

Romer said she cried "He's going to kill me, he's going to kill me, he's already killed one man" when she jumped into his car. He said Caril continued sobbing until she heard over his police radio that Starkweather had been captured east of Douglas.

Stopped Crying

Then, he said, Caril "stopped her crying" and "didn't talk any more."

Romer said he told Sprinkle that he had been grappling with mass killer Starkweather, and said "Mr. Sprinkle turned white."

Sheriff Heflin also said a note addressed "to the law

CARIL NERVOUS

It was a nervous girl who listened to witnesses tell of her capture in Wyoming.

Caril Fugate, flushed and intent, listened to Wyoming law enforcement officers, biting her lips and leaning forward in her chair to see past the tall frame of her defense attorney John McArthur and his partner Merrill Reller.

Once or twice she glanced at her relatives sitting about 10 feet away behind the rail which separated spectators from participants in the week-old trial.

Barbara Von Busch, a constant attendant at her sister's trial, continued to chew gum nervously — a characteristic habit. Mr. and Mrs. William Fugate, Caril's father and stepmother, watched the proceedings without apparent emotion even when Wyoming deputy sheriff Bill Romer told of Caril's admission that she had watched all 10 murders committed.

Spectators were turned away in large numbers from the Friday proceedings, many going willingly after a glimpse at Caril. The 120 spectator seats, cleared of prospective jurors for the first time, were constantly occupied. Many of the spectators ignored morning and afternoon recesses.

Ike Boasts Drop In Unemployment

... Rests His Case For GOP

Baltimore (AP)—President Eisenhower closed his campaign for a GOP Congress Friday night with an announcement that unemployment declined 300,000 in October. He called that "Republican progress" and dubbed the Democrats "gloom dogglers" regarding America's economy.

Resting his case 4 days before the voting, the President in a coast-to-coast television address also charged that the Democrats line up on both sides of every issue, including civil rights and development of long-range missiles.

To the cheers of an enthusiastic audience in the flag-decked 5th Regiment Armory, Eisenhower said he is convinced the Republican party "is the only political instrument that can give us sensible, united and progressive leadership in America."

Police Capt. Wade Poole estimated Eisenhower's crowd here at about 3,500 persons in an auditorium which seats 7,000. Republican state headquarters earlier this week had predicted an overflow crowd of about 10,000.

The President tore into what he called the Democratic party's radical wing. He contended it is made up of "political free spenders, . . men of little faith. . . extremists."

'Moving Ahead'

Then, crediting his administration, Eisenhower said about the economy generally:

"We are moving ahead. Recovery is on the march. All across America things are good. They get better every day."

The President got a round of applause in saying his administration has kept its 1952 pledge to bring sane, progressive and honest government to America. He got another round in asserting that since 1953 Americans have had to fight nowhere in the world.

There were cheers and applause, too, when he reported an October decline of 300,000 in unemployment to a new jobless total of about 3,800,000—compared with a June high in the recession of 5,537,000.

'Fell Flat'

On the business slump issue "the opposition fell flat on its face," Eisenhower said. He added the new unemployment figures to his speech during a 45-minute ride by special train from Washington to Baltimore.

The President arrived back in Washington at 10:30 p.m. EST.

He said:

"Just a few minutes before coming to Baltimore this evening, I received some information you will want to hear.

"It is very good news.

'Just Learned'

"I have just learned that in the month of October unemployment went down another 300,000.

"This means that in the last 3 months unemployment has dropped by one and a half million people. . .

"That's Republican progress—not just talk, not leaf-raking schemes, not federal handouts. Just sensible leadership."

Ordinarily unemployment figures are not announced by the government until a week or 10 days after the start of each month.

Chiang Fight OK If Revolt Comes

... Dulles—Visit Pledge Fixed

Washington (AP)—The State Department said Friday that Nationalist China could use force "in case of a large scale uprising" against the Red Chinese, or in self defense.

This appeared subject to interpretation as a watering down of the recent pledge by President Chiang Kai-shek to renounce force as his main reliance for a return to the Asian mainland. But State Department press officer Lincoln White declared there was no change in the situation.

At White's news conference Nationalist Vice President Chen Cheng was quoted as saying that if the Communists enlarge their attack on the Quemoy islands this might open up the time for Nationalist attack on Red mainland positions.

Apparently that was an interpretation of Chen's statement in Taipei that if the Reds expand the fighting in the offshore islands the Nationalists "should be well prepared for a long struggle in order to achieve a bigger victory." Chen himself did not enlarge on the matter of a "bigger victory."

White said Chen's statement was made to clear up "misunderstandings" among overseas Chinese as to the precise nature of the agreement on the use of force which Chiang and Secretary of State Dulles reached at Taipei a week ago.

'Primary'

Chiang pledge in a joint communique that Nationalist China would not use force as a primary means of realizing its "sacred mission" of ending Red rule in China.

He said the foundation for that mission "resides in the minds and hearts of the Chinese people," an obvious reference to an uprising against the Reds.

Asked about Chen's statements, White told a news conference:

"The (State) Department believes these statements do not indicate any departure from the announced Republic of China policy that the primary means of carrying out that government's mission of restoring freedom to its citizens on the mainland will be peaceful.

"This, of course, does not prelude the use of force in self defense or in case of a large scale uprising on the mainland."
