

Remains of Two More 'Lady Be Good' Crew Members Found in Libyan Desert

HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP)—Other was found by members of a 19-man U.S. Army search team which hunted the area for several weeks in April and May. The Army said experts have identified the bodies but names will not be released until final determination has been made by a board of officers. This procedure is necessary to establish an identification admissible in court, the Army said. The bodies are believed to be those of 7/Sgt. Harold S. Rippling, Saginaw, Mich., and S/Sgt. Guy E. Shelley, New Cumberland, Pa. A report from Tripoli said personal effects bearing the names of those men were found with the bodies. The B-24 bomber was discovered almost intact last year about 400 miles from the Mediterranean coast. It had made a pilotless belly landing after the crew parachuted while returning from a bombing raid on Naples, Italy, April 4, 1943. The Army made two unsuccessful searches last summer. Last February a British oil exploration team found the remains of five men 85 miles north of the plane. All five have been identified. A diary found on one of the five said one man, 2nd Lt. John S. Woravica, Cleveland, Ohio, failed to join the group after bailing out. Three others, Shelley, Rippling and S/Sgt. Vernon L. Moore, New Boston, Ohio, left the main party in search of help. The latest search party, headed by Capt. Myron C. Fuller, Placerville, Calif., used helicopters, light trucks and jeeps. On the team's fifth day in the desert, two men became lost during a driving sand storm. The remaining team members dropped their original missions and began looking for the missing men, Sgt. L. C. Jarvis A. Wheeler, Livingston, Tex., and Pfc. Ronald H. Bingham, Albany, Calif. They were found unhurt seven days later. Army officials said the still missing bodies of Moore and Moravica probably are covered by the endlessly shifting desert sand and no further search is planned.

UNM Bureau Places Students

Hundreds of University of New Mexico students will increase Albuquerque labor supply after school officially ends at 10 p.m. Saturday.

Positions already filled range from store clerking and camp counseling to engineering, secretarial work and manual labor. Robert Lalicker, director of the University Placement

Bureau, has already placed about 126 students. Extra clerks, cashiers, bookkeepers, or general office workers are available to businessmen as trade or as their staffs rotate on vacation. The Placement Bureau, whose services are free to both employers and students, invite the townspeople to line their summer positions, whether they are full-time or part-time. It takes orchids, as a rule, 10 or 12 years to bloom.
