Murray On Field Goal: UNC Fans Inhaled It Through

Times - News Sports Editor DUKE STADIUM, Durham -The toe was on the other foot yesterday, and Duke Coach Bill Murray, giving credit where credit was due, called the University of North Carolina football team one of the finest in the country following the Tar Heels' cliff - nanging 16-14 miumph.

Beaten by Duke via the field goal route for two straight years, the Tar Heels turned the tables yesterday. Soph Max Chapman of Banner Elk, N. C. snatched victory from almost certain defeat with a beautiful 42 - yard field goal with just 33 seconds left in the game.

"It was a risky play." mented Coach Murray ward, "but it worked.

"I didn't think the field goal was going to be long enough." he said. "I did all I could to keep it from going through. I know that. But there were a lot of Carolina fans surrounding the end zore I think all of them drew in their breath and inhaled that ball through the goal - posts.

Regardless of how the ball made as journey, at reached its desunation, and although the fighting Blue Devils came back with a mild threat themselves, it wasn't to be.

"I understand." Murray told reporters. "that Carolina has been offered the Gator Bowl bid and has accepted. They have my warmest congratulations The Tar Heels will give a good account. I'm sure, and we here at Duke will be rooting for them all the way."

Down 13 - 0 with half the third period exhausted - and it could have been worse, for a couple of good Tar Heel threats fell short — Duke roared back and cut the margin to 13 - 7 and then went ahead 14 - 13 on a sensational Scotty Glacken-to-Bill Futrell pass. Four minutes, 58 seconds re-mained, and when Carolina failed to move the ball, as did Duke when it went over, only 1.23 remained when the Tar Heels again got the ball. Quickly they moved down the field on passes, and with only

33 seconds left — the clock read 21 - Chapman booted the game - winning 42 - yard field

Clemson Game Taught Heels A Lesson

"The timekeeper was confused throughout the game," criticized Murray, and the fact was evident to the 47,500 fans on hand. Once in the first half the clock ran for 30 seconds when it should have been idie.

And, after Carolina's field goal, the clock continued to run until Murray ran out onto the field and brought the goof to the attention of officials.

"The official said he believed six seconds had elapsed when the clock should have been stopped," said the Duke coach, "but I know it was more than that. We finally arrived at a figure of 12 seconds Lots of people wondered why the clock did not run for 12 seconds after we got the ensuing kickoff, and that was the reason.

Murray said be thought around 15 seconds were lost to his team. The three extra seconds might have given the Blue Devils one more play from the Carolina 30-yard line—if indeed the Dukes were deserving the extra moment. If he had had one more play, would he have gone for the field goal and a 17-16 triumph?

"Certainly not," said Murray.
"We have nobody who can kick the ball 47 yards (30 from scrimmage, 10 to the goal post from the goal - line and seven behind the scrimmage line). We would have tried a pass into the end-zone.

However, on the final play of the game from the Carolina 45, the Dukes ran the ball. Did Murray call the play?

No I did not," he said. "That was the quarterback's call, and (See UNC on Page 5-B)
