A LIFT FOR TODAY

Lay hold on the life which is life indeed.—I Tim. 6:19
When we are aware of God's life within and every where without, we feel secure in this upholding, protecting life. It is the way we interpret the things that happen, and that which we see around us that shape our lives.

Lord give us the wisdom and grace to see the light of Thy truth.—Park

ANYTHING MAY HAPPEN

The Ku Klux Klan may suffer another humiliation in Robeson County this week.

Reports from Pembroke indicate that it probably would have been dangerous for a Klansman to identify himself as such on the street there within the past few days. A Klan meeting is scheduled for Saturday night at or near Maxton, but it is anybody's guess whether it will be held. There is plenty of speculation about the possibility of violence, with Klansmen on the receiving end. One man in the Pembroke area has been quoted as saying that he hasn't had any bird shot in his shotgun for several days. That might mean it is unloaded. It might have been said as a joke. Klansmen can do their own guessing about that.

They also can do their own guessing whether there will be enough police protection for them in case—just in case.

Some robbed men, presumed to be Klansmen riding to or from a meeting near Parkton several months ago, were booted and jeered at by members of another race as they rode by. It may be that the men in the cars had their feelings hurt, but there was no indication of any other injury. That might be regarded as a typical reaction in Robeson County. It might be, among some people. But not among the Indian people.

Indians seldom say "boo" when they have serious business to attend to. And there are indications that many Indians have taken a serious view of so-called "warnings" from the Klan.

A cross was burned near an Indian home in the eastern part of Lumberton one night this week. Police reported it as a prank. A cross was said to have been burned near the home of an Indian woman in the St. Pauls section the same night. So little was known about this that county officers had difficulty finding out just where it happened. Later, a cross was found unburned in the yard of a white man at Pembroke. Any of these incidents might have passed for a prank and have been laughed off. But a news agency received from an unidentified "Klan spokesman" a report that Klansmen had burned the crosses near St. Pauls and in Lumberton "as warnings to Indians in Robeson County against racial-mixing attempts." The report was given state-wide publicity.

One newspaper headlined its story, "Lumberton Klan Goes On Warpath Against Indians." That's a colorful way to put it. If there is a Klan unit in Lumberton at all, it has kept quiet in the manner of the Klan. There may be a few Klansmen here. There may be some escaped convicts here, for all that is known. Several years ago (at the time the late Senator McCarthy was ranting about Communists in the government) a speaker at a civic club meeting here said there were several Communists in Lumberton. Of course, he didn't name anybody, and people who had lived here all their lives without hearing of any local Communists still could not say with certainty that he was mistaken.

What can be said with certainty is that the idea of any representative group of Lumberton citizens going "on the warpath against the Indians" is ridiculous. Of course, that "on the warpath" phrase is a figure of speech, not intended to be taken literally. Still, it has a threatening sound and some people are inclined to take statements at face value.

A resolution condemning the Ku Klux Klan has been adopted by the Maxton town board which also called upon citizens of the town to boycott the scheduled Klan meeting. That looks like appropriate action under the circumstances. It might be added that curious spectators also would do well to stay away, for if trouble should break out quickly they might not get a chance to explain that they were just looking on.

Of course, nothing may happen. The Klan meeting may be called off, or moved to another location. It may be held and if any Indians show up they may be greeted cordially. Speakers may express good will toward all races. Klansmen may avow that they had no intention of offending the Indians, and may disclaim knowledge of any "warnings" to the race. Everybody may join in prayer and in singing "God Bless America."

But in case any Klansmen are looking for trouble the indications are that they will be able to find it.

CLIPPED COMMENT

BOY UNAFRAID OF TOIL

(Atlanta Journal)

People in the Agricultural Extension Service at Athens are quite elated, and understandably so, over the accomplishments of a Lowndes County 4-H Club member in growing sweet potatoes.

Freddie McLeod had a net return of $1,152 from two acres of sweet potatoes. Freddie is just 13, but he prepared and cultivated his crop with all the forethought and care of a juvenile Burbank.

Naturally, he used certified seed. The two acres received heavy applications of fertilizer, and the crop was hoed twice, and cultivated twice. It was properly dusted to keep insects away. Freddie put the money in the bank, against the day when he attends college. The Extension Service happily observes that Freddie, at the rate he's going, should be able to send money home instead of writing home for help.

New Town Hall Is Probable For Town Of Rowland

ROWLAND — The town board of Rowland, meeting this week, heard an audit report from Preston Douglas and discussed ways and means of financing the building of a new town office.

Several months ago, the town board purchased land on the main street, next to the new fire station, as a site for a new town office and police station. They are now investigating how to finance the construction, which would consolidate the town offices and services.

The Rowland jail has been inspected by representatives from the state and found to be in good condition. The jail has been painted, refurnished, new mattress covers have been placed on mattresses and it now passes sanitary requirements.

Ku Kluckers Put Indians On "List"

(Fayetteville Observer)
News out of Robeson county indicates that the organization which calls itself the Ku Klux Klan has decided to solve the Indian problem between dusk and dawn with the usual paraphernalia of mystic robes and fiery crosses.

There is a very good chance that the Robeson county Indian doesn't consider himself a problem and doesn't intimidate very easily. Certainly the history of the Indians in Robeson county and the rest of the United States would so indicate.

Historically the American Indian has been a proud, pugnacious and courageous individual, with a reputation of pushing back when pushed.

Could be that the K.K.K. has bitten off a bigger hunk than it can chew.

Our suggestion is that the K.K.K. cease its midnight operations, adopt friendly suasion instead of intimidation and operate like something except an Invisible Empire.

Failing in this our suggestion to the K.K.K., would be to get plenty of police protection if it decides to burn a fiery cross in Pembroke.

Minor Injuries In Highway Crashes

Two highway accidents were investigated Thursday by the State Highway Patrol, with one resulting in minor injuries.

Ruth M. Dakin of Haverhill, Mass., and her husband sustained minor injuries in an accident seven miles south of Lumberton on highway 301, about 12:10 p.m. Ptl. R. H. Trivette reported Mrs. Dakin was driving south when her right front tire blew out, causing the car to swerve across the highway to the left and overturn in a ditch. Damage was $1,500.

Ptl. F. D. Johnson reported that at 5 p.m. Thursday, John Allbrook of Maxton was driving west on a rural road, less than a mile south of Maxton, and attempting a left turn into a driveway as Dearl Dean Jacobs of Rowland, route 1, operating a heavy truck, attempted to pass and their vehicles collided. Damage to the car was $100 and to the truck $200.

BREAD OF LIFE
By Dr. A. Purnell Bailey

There are at least seven ways in which one can exercise stewardship over his possessions. As a pastor I have seen all of them used and believe that it would be helpful to check our own stewardship by them.

1. The careless way—with out thought or consideration.
2. The impulsive way—on the emotion of the moment.
3. The lazy way—when giving is less trouble than inquiring.
4. The self-denying way—when it means doing without.
5. The systematic way—deciding on a fixed proportion.
6. The equal way—giving as much as we spend on ourselves.
7. The heroic way—limiting one's expenses and giving the rest.

John Wesley encouraged all under his spiritual care to observe the following procedure: Earn all you can. Save all you can. Give all you can. The Dead Sea is a warning to those who practice all but the giving.

Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him. (1 Corinthians 16:2) vided, if the markets were available.

Repeal of the escalator clauses under which price supports on basic crops are increased when supplies decline.

A plan to require rural power and telephone co-ops to get their funds through private financing instead of from direct government loans. This would increase their interest rates.

Legislation to narrow the scope of the agriculture conservation program, long a favorite in Congress because it provides direct payments to farmers.

SURPLUS SALE OK

On the other hand, there was wide support for the Eisenhower proposals to extend Public Law 480 through which the government disposes of farm surpluses abroad to continue the Wool Act with its incentive payments, to extend the school milk program, to expand research seeking new uses for farm products, to eliminate next year the acreage reserve in the soil bank and concentrate on the conservation reserve, and to eliminate acreage allotments for corn.

Some members of the Senate and House agriculture committees said privately that the administration had some bargaining power on its side through the desire of producers of many crops to get out from under night acreage restrictions. These restrictions are required under present law so long as supplies exceed demand.

They said, however, that even this would not persuade Congress to vote minimum price supports as low as 60 per cent, although some felt that 70 per cent might be a possibility.

AIKEN DEFECTS

In the Senate, where the farm fight appears likely to break out first, the administration suffered a blow in the defeat of Sen. Aiken (R-Vt), senior GOP member of the Agriculture Committee.

Aiken said he would support a good part of the program, but he attacked the proposed reduction of dairy price supports to 60 per cent. Dairy production is an important item in his area.

The Vermont senator also declined to support new financing plans for rural power co-ops and the proposed conservation payment changes.

It was necessary for the administration to go down to the fourth Republican in seniority on the agriculture committee, Sen. Hickenlooper (R-Iowa), to find someone to introduce its bill. This was the first time Aiken has refused to do so. Both Sen. Young (R-ND) and Sen. Thyne (R-Minn), who rank behind Aiken, have been critical of the farm proposals.

Hickenlooper put it in with Sens. Thomas Martin (R-Iowa) and Dirksen (R-Ill). Its House sponsor is Rep. Dixon (R-Utah), who said, "I find in the House of Representatives a better understanding of the surplus problem and a greater willingness to consider solutions other than costly high price supports."

NO CHANCE

Sen. Young told a reporter the administration "won't even come close" to putting over minimum 60 per cent price supports.

Chairman Ellender (D-La) of the committee declared the President's farm program "doesn't have a ghost of a chance this year or any other year."

Ellender said he would insist on a one-package agriculture bill and indicated Democratic strategy would be to try to tie in items sought by the President with others not palatable to him.

shift freely from one crop to another, and to make other changes in accordance with their own individual good judgment."

Grady Stone, Jr., of Lovete road reported that Mrs. Stone had parked her car at the telephone office about 10 p.m. Wednesday and when she returned to it at 6 a.m., all four hubcaps had been stolen.

not sought by buyers.

Observers said that the three "pale and slick" varieties lost out to the growing popularity of filter cigarettes, which require a stronger tobacco for the flavor to reach the smoker.

Growers contended the discount program was announced after much of the 1957 crop already was planted and was established "without notice, hearing, or referendum." They also said the contract between the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp. and the warehousemen, also named as defendants, acted in restraint of trade. This thereby invalidated the contract, said the growers.

In Eastern District Court, Federal Judge Don Gilliam said the growers sought "to keep buyers out of the market with respect to tobacco."

USDA said the growers lacked in flavor and quality and were generally of light body and were
