Victim Of Attack Clover Native Dies Of Wounds

ATLANTA (AP)—A Georgia Tech professor died early today from wounds received in a mystery attack upon him by two youths. He was Dr. William Knox Purley, 32, native of Clover, S. C., and an associate professor in the physics department at Tech. Witnesses said he was assaulted on the street at about 1:30 a.m. yesterday. He was found beaten and dazed on the sidewalk a few blocks from his apartment.

CAUGHT, BEATEN

Patrolmen B. E. Barnes and J. E. Duke reported two witnesses told them they saw two youths chase the professor down the street, overtake and "beat" him. They fled when seen, the witnesses said.

Homicide Sgt. J. E. Helms said that upon Purley's death at 3 a.m. a half dozen or more investigators were put on the case to track down the attackers. He added that if caught, the assailants would face murder charges. "We know practically nothing about the attacks," said Helms early in the day. "It, as far as we know, was not a robbery attempt. We don't know what the motive was. It's all a mystery." The police said that when they

Clinton Lawyers Plan Last Talks

By RELMAN MORIN
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Opposing lawyers in the Clinton segregation trial were working today on final arguments to present to the all-white jury Monday morning.

Their closing statements may hold far more importance in this case than in the usual lawsuit, for two reasons: 1. Tremendous national issues are inherent in the suit. On trial are 10 men and one woman accused of conspiring to keep Negro students out of Clinton High School last fall. But beyond the guilt or innocence of the 11 people are the great issues of entering the Supreme Court ruling that public schools should be desegregated "with all possible speed," the "so-called revolution" in the United States, as a southern defense lawyer put it, and the possible effects of this case on future civil rights suits. 2. The defense is setting out to show that the U. S. government failed to prove its charges of conspiracy. In a daring maneuver, the northern attorneys put only six witnesses on the stand. They say they had "40 or 50 more." But they believed the very fact that they presented so little testimony to rebut the government's witnesses will help convince the jury no case exists to convict the 10 Tennesseans and dark-haired John Kasper, northern segregationist organizer. They said that, in their final summations, they will hammer home the point that prosecution testimony was "irrelevant and immaterial. . . not worth answering."

U. S. Dist. Judge Robert L. Taylor allowed to each side four hours for argument.

Assembly May Solve Dilemma

RALEIGH (AP)—Mounting protests to action which would remove foreign-born doctors from staffs of state institutions have raised the possibility of a special legislative session to settle the issue. The Legislature could write into law authority for the doctors, who were educated at schools not recognized by the American Medical Association, to continue their work. However, the decision on a special session would be up to Gov. Holt. He will confer with principals of the dispute on Aug. 2.

Unstead charged that the examiners "deliberately waited to announce their decision until after the 1957 Legislature adjourned on June 12. He said the medical board acted June 10 but did not give mental hospitals officials notice until June 25. The Legislature could write into law authority for the doctors, who were educated at schools not recognized by the American Medical Association, to continue their work. However, the decision on a special session would be up to Gov. Holt. He will confer with principals of the dispute on Aug. 2.

SKULL FRACTURE

The officers drove him to his apartment. Later, his condition became critical and he went to Crawford Long Hospital. An associate at Tech said his skull was fractured and he had serious bruises on his body. Purley had been at Tech about three years. His slaying was the fourth in Atlanta in 12 days. Purley was born June 24, 1925, son of the late Lawson Howell Purley and Mrs. Katie Purley. He was valedictorian of the 1942 graduation class of Clover High School, and earned his bachelor's degree at Duke University in 1948, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He received his master's degree at Duke University in 1949, and a Ph.D. in physics at the University of Michigan. A World War II combat veteran with the Army Air Force, he received the Air Medal with oak leaf cluster for meritorious action in combat as a B17 waist gunner.

Deposed Queen Will Cash In On Notoriety

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—A beauty queen toppled from her Miss United States throne by her own deception flew back to Maryland today with the prospect of cashing in on the sensation she created in the Miss Universe contest. The 18-year-old daughter of one of Lima's leading families was last night judged the fairest in the field of international beauties. She is 5 feet 7 with 36-23-36 measurements. There was no American in the finals—because of the disqualification of Leona Gage, Maryland's married Miss United States. The girls from south of the border made a runaway of the finals. A gorgeous blonde from Brazil, Terceira Gonçalves Morango, 20, placed second, and dark-eyed Maria Rosa Gamio, 19, of Cuba, was fourth.

Sonia Hamilton, 23, a stately blonde from London, was third choice in the judging and the first to take the crown. Geri Daub, 19, of Germany was chosen fifth from among 15 semifinalists. Tears flowed freely backstage after the winners were announced. Miss Zender donned her pearl-studded crown and faced photographers with a tearful stream down her face—and a smile of joy on her lips. Her parents, Eduardo and Rosa Zender, rushed dazed-eyed to the stage to embrace their beautiful daughter. The sight of the happy family—plus the long strain of the contest—snapped something inside Miss Germany. Huge tears rolled endlessly down her face. "I am homesick," she sobbed. "Everyone seems to be crying and family but I have no one. I want to go home."

But the 19-year-old Hamburg girl had a large portion of the crown with her and there was distinct disappointment in some sectors when her Grace Kelly-like beauty was passed over by the judges in favor of Miss Peru. The Peruvian charmer was by no means an unpopular choice, however. On each night of her appearance she drew some of the loudest applause heard as the crowd watched her slow, slinky progress down the runway—a movement at once full of grace and sex appeal.

INTRUDER KILLED BY BLIND MAN

CINCINNATI (AP)—The blind father of seven shot and killed an intruder in his West End apartment here early today. The man killed was identified as Walter Hall, 26. Willie Jackson, 46, said he was awakened about 3:30 a.m. when he heard the man move a fan while entering his room through a window. "I just lived five times at the border," said Jackson who is able only to distinguish daylight. He said he had the gun under his pillow. Police said Jackson told them Hall had tried to break into his apartment several times previously.

HEAT WAVE

OSLO, Norway (AP)—A heat wave has hit northern Norway. Temperatures reached 100 degrees in the Lapland city of Karasjok above the Arctic circle.

—7 ABOARD RETURNED PLANE— Local People Survive 'Bomb'

An Air France Super Constellation bearing seven Charlotte passengers was forced to return to Sydney Airport in Nova Scotia after a report was received that there was a bomb aboard. A two-hour search by firemen and airline officials failed to turn up any sign of a bomb and the New York-to-Paris airliner took off yesterday 2½ hours after it touched down at the Nova Scotia airport. "LOT OF THINKING" Mrs. Elizabeth Prince, a reporter for The Charlotte News, was a passenger on the plane. She said the air was "tense" when word got around that there might be a bomb aboard. "We did a lot of thinking," Mrs. Prince added.

Many Senators Favor Vote Inclusion Only

WASHINGTON (AP)—Forty of 64 senators willing to state their position said today they favor reducing the scope of the administration's civil rights bill to the point of providing only for enforcement of voting rights. A canvass of 92 of the 95 present members disclosed 24 want to retain the measure provision for enforcement of any amendment. If all Senators participated—which rarely occurs—48 affirmative votes would be required for adoption of any amendment. As it passed the House, the bill would authorize the attorney general to act on his own initiative in seeking injunctions to enforce school integration. Desegregation in transportation and public places and other rights. These powers are contained in section 3 of the bill.

Sens. Anderson (D-NM) and Aiken (R-VI) have proposed striking this section from the bill. That would confine the measure largely to voting rights. The Attorney General could ask injunctions to prevent violations or threatened violations of such rights, and anybody disregarding the injunction could be punished by a federal judge without jury trial. Efforts of Republican and northern Democratic supporters thus far has produced no agreement on a substitute for section 3 which would retain even a portion of the enforcement powers in that part of the bill. Thus the Anderson-Aiken amendment may go to a Senate vote early next week without any leadership effort to change it's over-all terms. In advance of this major test, nearly one third of the Senate's members said they are yet undecided on the issue of cutting the House measure down to a voting-protection bill. Southern Democratic opponents of the measure have made it clear they will vote for all amendments that will soften its terms and then vote against the bill. Privately, some of them have been saying that they could live with a "voting rights" bill and they have made strenuous efforts to pare the measure down in that direction.

COULD LIVE WITH IT

For varying reasons 10 Republicans and Democrats—including nine Democrats from states outside the South—indicated they are willing at this time to reduce the scope of the House measure. Senators favoring limiting the scope of the bill to the enforcement of voting rights included Sens. E. W. Scott of North Carolina and Thurmond and Johnson of South Carolina.

Hoffa May Be Top Teamster

WASHINGTON (AP)—James R. Hoffa emerged today from his bribery charge acquittal in a strong position to take over from Samuels as boss of the 1.5 million member Teamsters Union. A federal court jury cleared Hoffa yesterday of charges he conspired and bribed to plant a spy on the staff of the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee. Hoffa, 44-year-old Midwestern Teamster boss, immediately announced he would get together with friends in Chicago within the next few days to decide on "any future activities in the union." At present, there is little doubt in the labor movement that Hoffa can take over Beck's spot if he wants it, or name who he wants as Teamsters president.

Hoffa flew to Detroit last night. In response to a question there, he said he financed his trial defense entirely from his own funds, and that he had declined offers by several locals to raise a defense fund for him. He said he had mortgaged his home, cottage and automobile.

—LOST STUDENT LANDS SAFELY— Flier Finds Highway Haven

(SPECIAL TO THE NEWS)
SALISBURY — A student pilot who reportedly wandered away from Smith Reynolds Airport in Winston-Salem when a haze covered the runways made an emergency landing on an unfinished highway near here last night. Angelo Capparella, 422 Brookwood Dr., Winston-Salem, took off alone about 7 p.m. from Piedmont Aviation Flying School in a two-place Piper Tri-Pacer. He planned to log some solo flying time within a radio contact distance of the field. VIEW OBSERVED As Capparella practiced turns, according to school officials, he drifted to the tower's

Briggs Gets Hartin Case

WASHINGTON (AP)—An Air Force spokesman today officials at Briggs Air Force Base, El Paso, Tex., must decide what to do with a young airman who surrendered to South Carolina police. The spokesman said Almart C. Broadus Jr. (Dick) Hartin, 20, of Spartanburg, S.C., was listed as absent without leave from Briggs on Feb. 15. He said Hartin was dropped from the AWOL list on March 2, an action customary taken after a man is AWOL 30 days.

Hartin surrendered to Spartanburg police, who turned him over to authorities at Donaldson Air Force Base, S.C. Hartin was held in the Donaldson brig. Air Force headquarters here said Briggs must decide what to do in the case since the AWOL charge against Hartin was initiated there. Hartin said he left his 17-year-old pregnant wife to clear up his status with the Air Force. The spokesman said he was discharged Jan. 27 for the purpose of immediately re-enlisting for four years. He said he was sworn in again the next day, but was told at the Briggs finance office that his physical condition barred him from re-enlistment.

Hartin said the officer who swore him in told him to forget what he was in or out of the service but had heard Air Police were looking for him. The spokesman said Almart C. Broadus Jr. (Dick) Hartin, 20, of Spartanburg, S.C., was listed as absent without leave from Briggs on Feb. 15. He said Hartin was dropped from the AWOL list on March 2, an action customary taken after a man is AWOL 30 days.

PATH MARKER

Capt. Roberts quoted the lost pilot as saying a light curing agent being used on the pavement marked the landing path. The concrete had firmed enough to take the landing. Flying school authorities reported Finner also landed on the highway and both planes used as a takeoff strip for the flight home.
