

(U.S. Coast Guard photo via AP Wirefoto)

Cuban Kidnapers Caught by Camera

Some of the 19 Cuban refugees kidnaped by a Castro patrol are seen on a Cuban PT boat in foto taken from U. S. Coast Guard plane. The refugees were forcibly removed from the British island of Anguilla Cay. They had fled Cuba in two fishing boats. Ten others escaped when U. S. planes buzzing Castro commandos frightened the searchers away. See fotos below.

(UPI Telefoto)
Mrs. Juan Hernandez, clutching a Bible, arrives in Miami with her daughter and husband. They were among 10 Cubans who escaped kidnaping. Their only arms were Bibles.

(Associated Press Wirefoto)
Marita Lorenz, at Miami Airport, watches Jimenez' plane leave.

He's Losing His Appeal

Marcos Perez Jimenez (white shirt), former dictator of Venezuela, smiles with tight lips as U.S. and Venezuelan security officers escort him to plane in Miami. He was fresh out of court appeals to keep him in the U.S. Daughter, Margot, 17, (foto right), grieves at his departure; American husband comforts her. Jimenez will await embezzlement charges in an air-conditioned cell back home. Marita Lorenz (foto left), filed paternity suit.

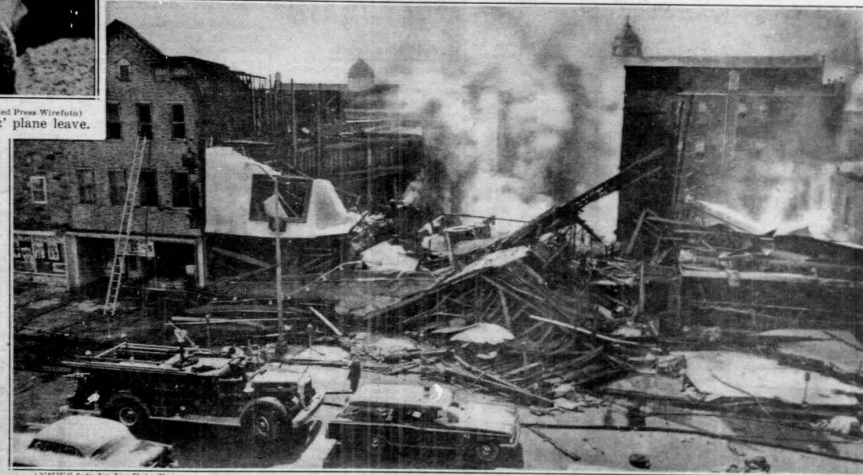

(UPI Telefoto)

(U.S. Coast Guard photo via AP Wirefoto)

Castro's climbs aboard copter; fellow crewmen join him, U. S. Coast Guard plane spots them at Anguilla Cay.

(NEWS photo by Joe Petrella)

Firemen [→] train water on the furniture store during the height of fire. High winds fanned blaze, making firemen's work more difficult. The fire destroyed several stores, a tenement building and two frame houses. No injuries were reported.

A Losing Battle in Bayonne

Hours after blaze broke out in Bayonne, N. J., business district, thick smoke continues to rise from rubble of a furniture store. Its roof had collapsed during general alarm blaze which broke out early yesterday. See the foto at right.

(NEWS photo by Joe Petrella)

